Union National School, examined by him on the 24th ult.

" Taking into account the very limited period allowed each day (only three hours) for literary instruction, the assiduity of the Pupils generally was very creditable to the teachers - The School appears to be fairly progressing.
The Teachers method of conducting the business is (with a few exceptions to which I draw his attention) judicious, and the pupils generally appear to take a reasonable interest in their own improvement -
The School is inadequately provided with slates, and pencilholders, and a supply of other descriptions of requisites will be wanted soon
